Early Childhood Music Therapy and Autism Spectrum Disorders

Developing Potential in Young Children and their Families

Edited by Petra Kern and Marcia Humpal

Foreword by David Aldridge

due September 2012 • 304 pp • ISBN 978-1-84905-241-2 • Paperback • $39.95

"This book provides a resource of music therapy interventions firmly based in evidence from both research and practice. We now have a platform from which we can all develop further"

—From the foreword by David Aldridge, Social Science Researcher, Author of many books and Fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine, London

This book presents a comprehensive overview of current research and music therapy practice for young children with autism spectrum disorders (ASD) and their families. Topics include an overview of recent developments in ASD, specific implications of evidence-based practice, and a newly conducted meta-analysis providing evidence that music therapy is an effective treatment option for young children with ASD. Subsequent chapters cover assessment, goals and treatment approaches such as Applied Behavior Analysis (ABA), Social Stories™, Nordoff-Robbins Music Therapy, and the DIR®/Floortime™ Model as well as instructional strategies and techniques used in music therapy practice. The authors discuss collaboration and consultation with interdisciplinary team members, including early childhood educators, speech-language pathologists, and occupational therapists. Family-centered practice, how to integrate music into home routines and insights from music therapists who are parents of children with ASD enrich this work. Case scenarios, examples, checklists, charts, tip sheets, music scores, online and other resources, plus an annotated bibliography complete the book. Throughout its sixteen chapters, renowned experts share knowledge and practical applications that will support the implementation of effective music therapy practices and enhance the understanding of music's powers for music therapists, students, professionals, educators, families, and anyone interested in working with young children with ASD.

Petra Kern, Ph.D., MT-DMtG, MT-BC, MTA, owner of Music Therapy Consulting, has a clinical and research focus on young children with autism spectrum disorders, inclusion, and staff training. ISBN 9781843101406

Paperback • $37.95

Research and clinical work are often perceived as opposites in the field of music therapy. This book shows, for the first time, how these two areas of work can creatively complement one another, proving beneficial to both disciplines. Each chapter is written by a leading researcher and practitioner in the field, and the book covers a wide spectrum of approaches within different settings.

A must for all professionals working and studying within the music therapy area, this is also an informative and useful book for health researchers.
